It all begins with the vines

Angelo attributes much of the high calibre of Zitta wines to the topography of the vineyard and its varying soil profiles and elevations.

Located on the slopes of the Moppa Hills along the mineral-rich banks of the Greenock Creek in the Barossa's North West, the vineyard has been producing premium quality grapes for over one and a half centuries. It was established in 1864 by colonial settlers, and Angelo considers himself extremely fortunate to have acquired such a quality parcel of land.
